FIFTH GENERATION WINE MERCHANTS

“It seems obvious now, but 25 years ago when I started selling wine En Primeur, Barolo was not on the EP scene. A run of very good vintages, a value offering, delicious wines in limited supply that can age beautifully. All the ingredients for En Primeur. This region is unsurprisingly now our third most followed for early releases, and your cellar will be richer for including them.”

BAROLO REPORT 2020

The 2019 Barolo en primeur campaign was one of the most exciting set of releases of last year, with an array of stunning wines from a fantastic vintage. Our first dedicated Barolo tasting in March was a great success and so when returning to Piedmont to taste earlier this year, the 2020 vintage had a lot to live up to! Thankfully, the wines shone and we are just as excited with the selection, which features many of the same wines that proved so popular this time last year, alongside a selection of new additions to the offer from estates that impressed us when tasting in situ. Barolo is situated in Piedmont in the North West of Italy and is the source of some of the greatest, most age-worthy red wines in the world. A complex patchwork of vineyards across the hills surrounding a cluster of villages (one of which gives its name to the appellation), Barolo is both well-established as a staple of any serious cellar and one of the most exciting, dynamic wine regions in Italy. Nebbiolo is the grape of Barolo, with no other variety authorised in the blend. Known for its concentration of tannins, Nebbiolo produces complex, long-lived wines that offer profound expressions of their place. As with all great wine regions, there are distinct differences evident in the glass from commune to commune and vineyard to vineyard. There are few wine producing regions in the world with quite such an array of exposures and topographies within a relatively small area, which goes some way to explaining the profound contrasts that are often evident, even between wines produced from neighbouring sites. Despite the endless complexity of the landscape, there are some useful generalisations that can be made. There are essentially two main soil types in Barolo, with the result that wines produced in the communes of the north-western sector of the wider region – Verduno, La Morra and Barolo – tending towards a more ethereal, brighter and open style, with those from the south-eastern part - Serralunga and Monforte – more powerful, with a denser tannic structure. Castiglione Falletto has sites across the boundary of both soil types and often produces wines that offer the full range of characteristics that can be found in Barolo.

THE 2020 VINTAGE

2020 was, broadly speaking, a warm year which has produced relatively accessible, fruit-forward wines. The growers that our team tasted with earlier in the year were all pleased with the quality of the vintage, with many happy to have produced wines which are different in style from the more powerful 2019s, but that offer clear expressions of their sites and winemaking style.

The 2020s sit stylistically between the open, relatively light 2018s and the denser 2019s and will likely enter their drinking windows before the latter, but keep for longer and offer a little more depth than the former.

WHY BUY BAROLO EN PRIMEUR?

There is no question that Barolo produces some of the most long-lived wines in the world, with many examples boasting drinking windows that cover several decades. Buying a case of Barolo on release is an investment in the cellar that will offer immense pleasure in years to come. Although many of the top wines will be at their best after some time in the cellar, plenty of the Barolo blends – those without a single vineyard or village on the label – will be accessible within a couple of years of landing and in many cases, the Langhe Nebbiolo wines in this offer will give immediate pleasure on arrival and serve as a delicious introduction to a producer's style.
